Astana

Virtual Sixth Astana Economic Forum and Global Anti-Crisis Conference to be launched on G-Global (www.group-global.org).

A virtual Sixth Astana Economic Forum and World Anti-Crisis Conference will be launched April 19 on the G-Global website at www.group-global.org. It will be available until May 19, three days before the start of the actual events on May 22.

The virtual project will allow those interested in the program and topics of the Forum and the conference to offer solutions to today's comprehensive global socio-economic challenges.

Scholars, business people, government people and ordinary citizens from around the world are encouraged to take part in the discussions.

A key objective of the project is democratizing discussions about international economic, financial, social and other problems.

The hope is that government officials, experts who are not planning to participate in the Astana Economic Forum and World Anti-Crisis Conference and others can offer their assessments of the ideas aimed at solving global problems.

The G-Global website is a place where the public can place articles, upload reports, participate in discussions, conduct or join a video conference, ask a question that could be discussed at the Astana Economic Forum or World Anti-Crisis Conference or start debate.

The Eurasian Economic Club of Scientists Association, the main organizer of the Forum and G-Global, encourages everyone to take part in the discussions as well as enter several annual G-Global competitions.

Articles and views posted between annual Forums are automatically G-Global competitions. First prize winners of each competition are awarded about 5 million tenge.

This is a good opportunity to take part in an important debate about the world economic situation.
